At our parish, replied Allen, only five miles from this place; and the bishop of Hereford, who is the knight s brother, is to read the service. Robin Hood said no more, -but put off his scarlet suit, and dressed himself like a harper, with a harp in his hand. He told twenty-four of his company to follow at a distance; and then Went alone into the church, and found the bishop putting on his robes. What do you want here? said the bishop. I am a harper, said Robin Hood, the best in four counties round; I heard there was to be a wedding, and I am come to offer my service. -- You are welcome; I shall be glad to hear your music. Soon after this, the bride and bridegroom came in. The old knight hobbledalong, and was hardly able to walk up to the altar; and after him came a maiden as fair as the day, and blushing like the summer morning. This is not a fit match, said Robin Hood, and I cannot agree to its taking place; but since we are come to the church, the bride shall choose for horse Then Robin Hood put his born to his mouth, and blew into it; when straight fourand-twenty archers were seen leaping along the church-yard path, and came inat the porch. The first man was Allen-a-Dale, to give Robin Hood his bow. Robin Hood now turned to the...
