In addition, occupational safety and health requirements mandate that materials safety data sheets accompany hazardous materials to provide information and warnings about potential dangers and appropriate 24 protective or response measures. The Safe Drinking Water Act and its amendments require public water systems to provide information to the public that would allow them to respond to violations of the National Primary Drinking Water Regulations - standards that protect public health by limiting the levels of contaminants in drinking water. Included in these notifications should be a description of the violation, any potential adverse health effects, what the system is doing to correct the problem, and whether consumers should 25 use an alternate source of water. While federal agencies, state and local governments, the private sector and Why Is It Important for the the general public routinely make risk management decisions (even Homeland Security though they may not think of them as such), threats of terrorism within the Advisory System...
