Excerpt: . not follow their motions) and laid in the midst among them, but the wheels missed him, and he has no great hurt; but the run increased, and the footman, thinking to catch a bridle, was by the coach beaten down, horse and all, and hath a contusion at the side of his knee which makes him lame, and that is the worst of the wounds in this action. But the coach still running, I was impatient to be out of action or endeavour to do somewhat towards preventing the worst of mischief, put the servant in my place next her lady, and crept out secundum artem, so that I had no hurt, but could not snatch the horses for speed, but called, and the people in the town endeavoured to stop the horses, but could not till in the midst of the town the coach fell with a great fracas. My wife had only the ordinary bruises on the side that fell only. Somewhat I think the edge of a coach box in rolling met with her forehead, and made a cut about three inches long, from a little within the hair to the eyebrow. As soon as my speed brought me up, I found her and the servant cleared without more harm, and having settled her in a house, went out and gave the necessary orders for a surgeon, c., who came to us at a minister s house, where we were...
