The person he fixed upon as nurse to his child, was a young woman who had been left a widow, (with an infant about the same age as little Emma,) she lived with old Rachel Saunders, her mother, in a little cottage, on a heath, some miles distant from London. To this young woman did Mr. Barnard commit the care of his little girl, during her infant years; and Mother Mary, (for so Emma learned to call her foster-mother,) proved a most kind and indulgent nurse.
