Brand New Book ***** Print on Demand *****.From the beginning of the first chapter: THE problem which vexed the mind of Faust, pondering the philosophy formulated at the outset of The Gospel according to St. John, is solved so far as the genesis of The Bohemians is concerned by an acceptance of all the theories which Goethe's philosopher propounded. In the Beginning was Rafael Joseffy. -Thus we write. He was at once Word, Thought, Power and Deed. It was Joseffy who conceived the Club, Joseffy who suggested it to his friends, Joseffy who had the puissant force to mould them into agents of his will and thus called The Bohemians into being-called the Club into being and at once planted it in fruitful ground. It was the adoption of his spirit of good-fellowship, helpfulness, unselfish aims, mutual respect among artists, hatred of petty jealousy and devotion to manly social and artistic ideals which gave the Club its firm foundation. It has been by keeping the salient and admirable traits of his character in mind as a guide that the Club has achieved a growth, stability and usefulness which make it unique among organizations of its kind. It will be by keeping in the path illuminated by his character as man and musician that The Bohemians shall remain the active and forceful factor which it now is in the artistic life of New York and the world of music at large. Let us therefore for a moment bring back the man to our mental vision. The most striking and amiable trait in the character of Rafael Joseffy was his lack of envy or jealousy and his unfailing courtesy and kindness towards his colleagues. And this...
